SACCO TO CONTINUE HIS HUNGER STRIKE AS DECISION PENDS

Governor Will File Result Of Review Wednesday Night

BOSTON, Aug. 1.—Nicola Sacco entered the sixteenth day of his hunger strike today in state's prison with his mental condition becoming hourly of graver concern.

Sacco's fellow prisoner, Bartolomeo Vanzetti, who has also been on a self-imposed fast broke it yesterday, taking milk, coffee, meat cakes and bread. For breakfast Vanzetti had milk, coffee and bread, the fifteen days with only one meal not having done him any visible harm.

The hunger strike of the two men was in protest against the alleged secret method employed by Governor Alvan T. Fuller in reviewing the case of Sacco and Vanzetti accused of slaying a South Braintree paymaster and his guard, and doomed to die in the electric chair August 10th.

Governor Fuller rounds up today his investigation by hearing the last witness in the state house.

While completing the writing of his decision, the chief executive is in close touch with Phillips House, Massachusetts' general hospital, where his son Alvan T. Jr. has been under the surgeon's knife for appendicitis. He is reported to be "making an unequal convalescence." This message cheered the governor and made possible the filing of the governor's momentous decision by the tentative date, Wednesday night.

The two accused men were not shifted to the death cells in the state prison as is customary ten days before an execution. Neither

GUNS OF GANGLAND CLAIM NEW VICTIM

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—The guns of gangland, which have blazed death to seven victims with the last few weeks, probably will add another to the toll today as Joseph Barba lay dying in a hospital with a dozen bullet slugs in his body.

Barba, said by police to be "in the racket," was shot as he stood at a street intersection.

WOMAN IS DROWNED

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 1.—Funeral services were being arranged here today for Mrs. Anna Thompson, 49, who was drowned in Buckeye Lake, near here, when she stumbled and fell from a boat pier into the lake. Her husband, Roy W. Thompson, dived after her and was almost drowned himself when the frantic woman seized him and dragged him under. Miss Anna Thompson, niece of the couple rescued her uncle with a boat.

COLORFUL CAREER OF LINCOLN C. ANDREWS BROUGHT TO CLOSE

Seymour Lowman Becomes Successor To Dry Chief New Chief Means New Order In Enforcement Policies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The colorful public career of a military man who tried to dry up the United States, officially came to a close today when former Lieutenant Governor Seymour Lowman, of New York, was sworn in as assistant secretary of the treasury to succeed General Lincoln C. Andrews, once "M. P." chief of the A. E. F.

Lowman, who has been functioning as acting dry czar for several weeks, has discarded many of the policies of his predecessor, although the decentralization of prohibition authority, developed by Andrews has been retained.

PRINCESS HELEN IS TAKING SOME BLAME FOR CAROL'S EXILE

Admits Leaving Her Consort Before He Began Scandal

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Princess Helen wife of Prince Carol and the mother of King Michael, the five year old ruler of Roumania, has written to Carol recently, admitting a great part of the responsibility for the present exile of the former crown prince, it was revealed today to International News Service. Helen said she had to ask Carol's forgiveness.

International News Service, through information just obtained, is in a position to give the authentic story of Carol's abdication for ten years, which followed his complete estrangement from Princess Helen.

Princess Helen left Carol before the present scandal developed, going to visit her mother and for bidding Carol to follow her. She declared she intended to obtain a divorce.

Carol came to Paris and Helen wrote to him later asking him not to return to Roumania, declaring that she never wanted to see him again.

Carol met Mme. Lupescu in Paris and accompanied her later to Italy where he received a command from Premier Bratiano to return to Roumania forthwith and admit wrongdoing publicly or abdicate his right of succession to the Roumanian throne.

Carol hot headedly chose the latter course as demonstrating clearly he was not ashamed of his actions. He believed, in view of his break with his wife, that he had done nothing for which he should ask forgiveness.

The car was but slightly damaged and the driver was unharmed.

WHEN AVIATION WAS YOUNG

Sixteen years ago this crowd gathered at Hendon aviation field outside London, England, to watch Claude Graham-White fly the fragile, spidery collection of wood, wire and fabric which passed in those days for an airplane. By way of emphasizing the contrast of past and present, inset is a picture of Colonel Lindbergh's plane which is now touring the United States in the interest of commercial aviation.

THIS, DEMPSEY SAYS, IS WHERE THAT DISPUTED WALLOP LANDED

Where that disputed blow landed on Sharkey, according to Dempsey, who is shown applying it to his manager, Leo Flynn. However, some fight critics assert the wallop was lower than this, and foul. Others support Dempsey's claim. Foul or fair? Try to decide.

MYSTERY SHIP IN PROBE

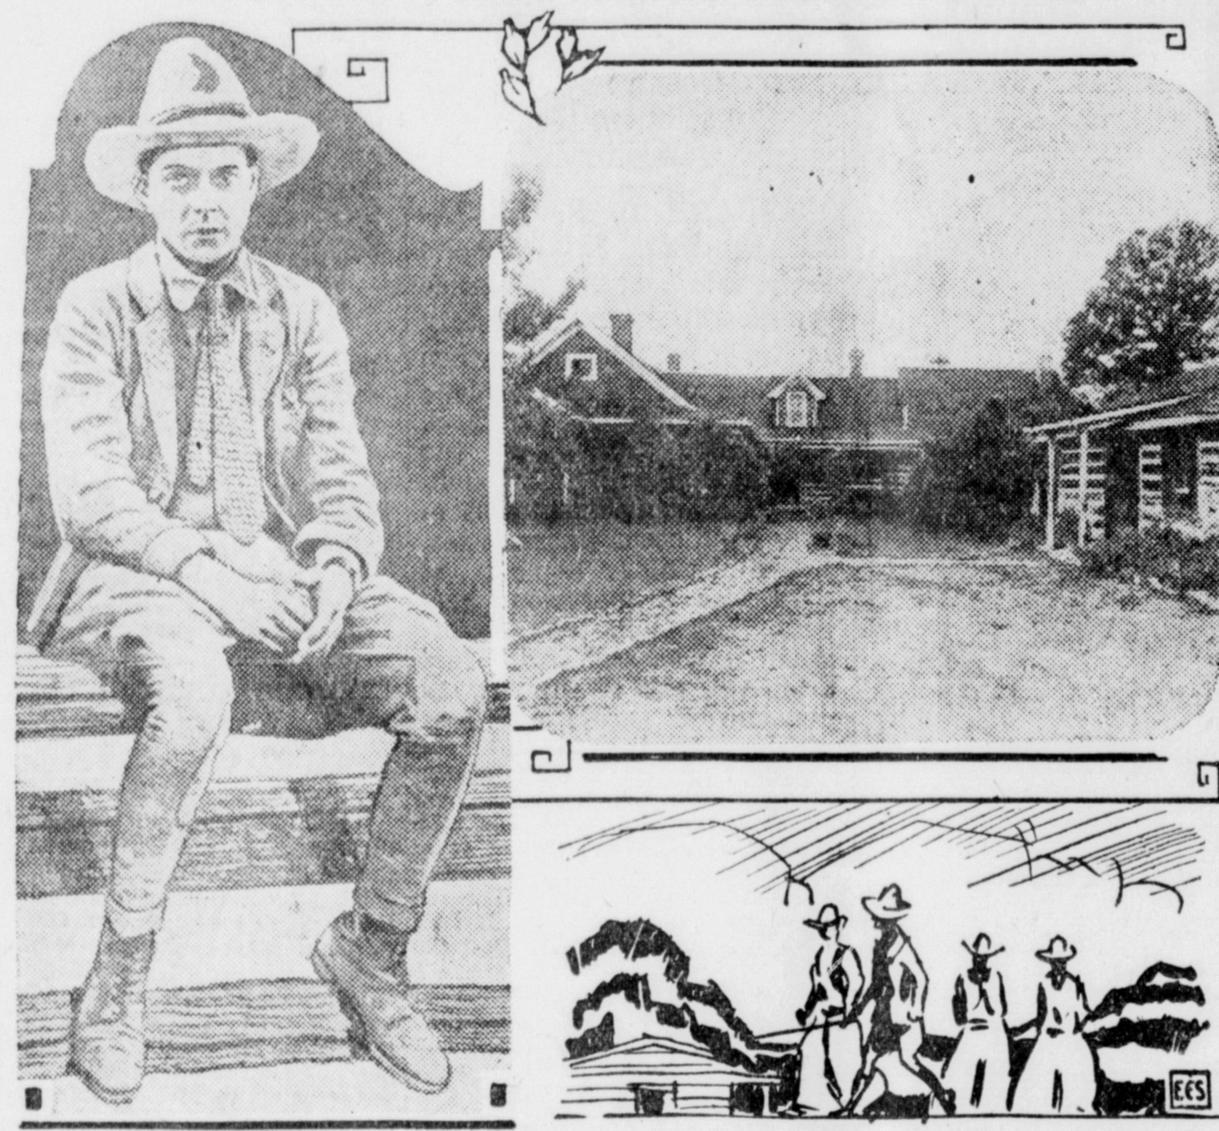

Federal officials in New York are endeavoring to unravel mysteries entwined in the story of the voyage of the four-masted schooner Kingsway from the gold coast of Africa. The cook's wife was slain with a razor; the captain was poisoned and the mate died mysteriously; there was a mutiny. Photo shows the vessel.

ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC CONQUERORS MEET FIRST TIME

Boston celebrated while the aerial conquerors of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans met for the first time since their recent epochal achievements. Here the America's air heroes in one group: 1-Bert Acosta; 2-Commander Richard E. Byrd; 3-Lieutenant George O. Noville; 4-Clarence Chamberlin; 5-Colonel Charles Lindbergh; 6-Lieutenant Albert Hegenberger; 7-Lieutenant Lester Maitland. Bernt Balchen does not appear in the photo, but was present.

PRINCE TO TURN RANCHER ONCE MORE

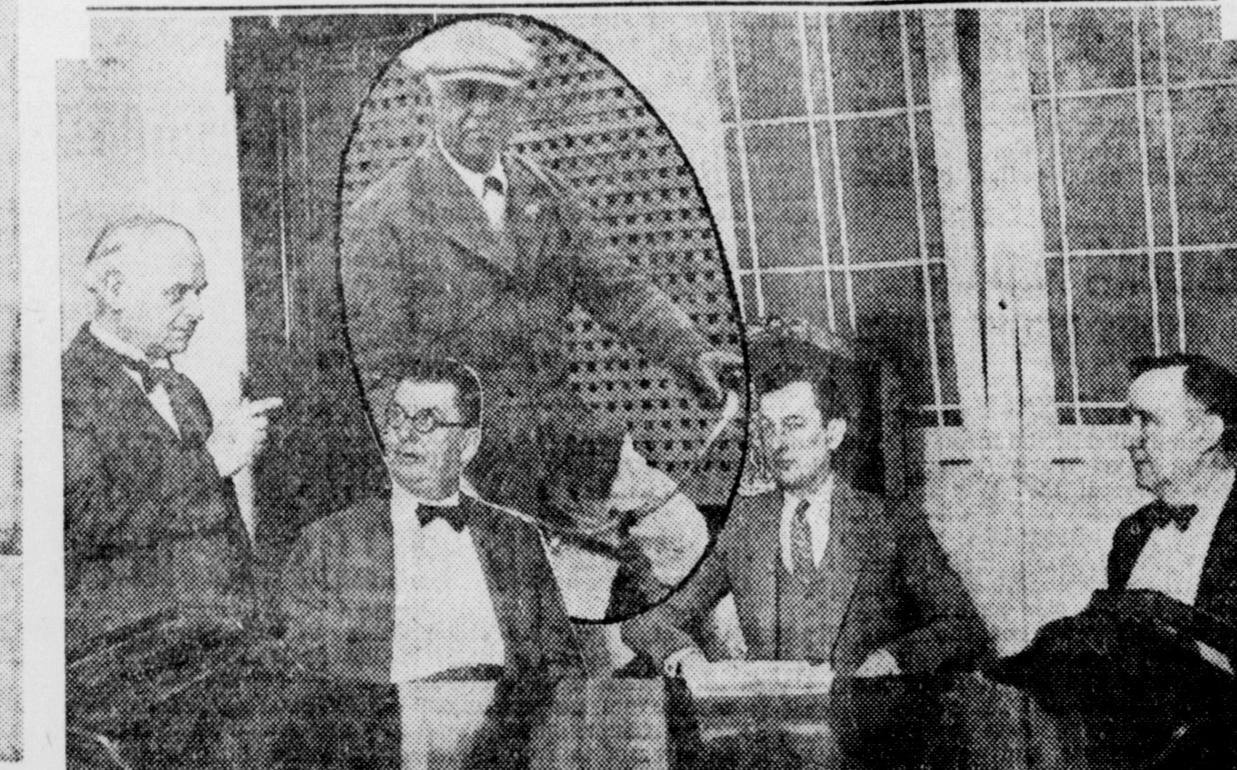

Accompanied by Stanley Baldwin, prime minister of Great Britain, and his wife, the Prince of Wales is soon to take up residence again on his E-P ranch, near Calgary, Alta. This picture shows the Prince in his western costume, against a background of the comfortable ranch house where Edward and his party will be entertained.

PARIS DOUBLES BACK ON FASHION TRAIL

French fashion designers are endeavoring to increase the lengths of skirts, in order to meet criticism of churchmen and to increase the consumption of dress materials. Having failed in their attempt to banish the abbreviated skirt entirely, they are now trying, by the addition of trailing trimmings, to simulate length. The pictures show how fashion is doubling back on its trail. Contrasted with three new Paris designs are two creations of a decade ago.

NEW YORK TRANSIT STRIKE AVERTED

On the eve of what promised to be the greatest transit tie-up in its history New York breathed a sigh of relief when it was announced that after a series of conferences with Mayor Walker the labor leaders had called off the strike and promised that there would be no interference with subway or elevated traffic until the city's plan for a co-ordinated system had been presented. This picture shows Hugh Frayne, A. F. of L. organizer, J. H. Coleman and Patrick J. Shea, in conference with Mayor Walker. Inset, Frank Hedley, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, on the bicycle he had stowed away in case of trouble.

Elusive Hero

After George Teames, thirteen, of Inglewood, Cal., saved a train from being wrecked, he disappeared, and his heroism only became public after railroad detectives sought him out. He is a Boy Scout and probably will receive the organization's highest life-saving honors. George raced a mile to warn an approaching train of a broken rail.

Hero of Marines

Newest photo of Captain Gilbert D. Hatfield, the heroic marine commander who defeated 2,000 Nicaraguan rebels with a detachment of 57 "Leathernecks." He now is the hero of the Marine Corps.

Wounded Consul

A Mexican bandit, invading the home of William Edgar Chapman, United States consul at Puerto, Mexico, shot down Chapman and severely wounded him. Mexican authorities have not yet apprehended the gunman, although the state department has made urgent demands for action.

CINDERELLA FINDS A PRINCE

For many years Gertrude Gruen took dictation every day from her boss, Solomon N. Oppenheimer, millionaire real estate man of New York. That's all over now, and Gertrude is on her way to Europe for a honeymoon, as "the rich Mrs. Oppenheimer." This snapshot was made as the couple left the rectory of St. Patrick's Cathedral, after the marriage ceremony.

THE QUEEN'S CHOICE

It is no secret that Marie, Rumania's beautiful queen, now widowed, is the real power behind the regency which has been established to guide the destinies of little King Michael I, shown in this recent portrait with his grandmother. This is Queen Marie's favorite picture of the many that have been taken of herself and her grandson.

STRIVING FOR NEW RECORDS

It appears we have a new flagpole sitting champion. A Chicago man has climbed down after spending 16 days and some hours on top of a pole. Various persons in other parts of the country are already setting in an attempt to hatch out a new record.

This freak contest is only the latest. We have had marathon piano players, endurance dancers, champion hog-callers, hot-dog eaters, coffee drinkers, rope skippers. We expect to hear any time that some humble bill collector is claiming the world's championship for long-distance skidding on his left ear, or that a red-haired man with one leg is starting out to hop farther than any other red-haired man with one leg has ever hopped.

In fact, if the participants in freak events of recent years were to be laid end to end, they would reach from here to Medicine Hat. Some folks, may be in favor of laying them thus and leaving them there.

This is too harsh. Vanity and ambition—to be noticed, to be somebody, to make a name and a fortune and a career, to be Babe Ruth instead of a sandlot player—these motives move most Americans to some extent at least.

Why shouldn't people sit on flag-poles or do any other biggest, longest, most foolish stunt in the country where some states send their biggest windjammers or biggest spenders to the Senate and the heaviest homerule hitter makes more money and has more admirers than a president?

Why, we expect to hear any time that some patriotic billionaire is moving Mt. Everest to the United States so we may have the biggest mountain.

CONTROLLING THE WORLD

Clarence W. Barron, dean of financial newspaper publishers, inaugurates the forty-first year since the founding of his first financial paper, the Boston News Bureau, with an article in his Financial weekly predicting forty years of material progress ahead for the United States, surpassing the forty years just past.

The seventy-two-year-old financial genius believes that with our Federal Reserve System and with our transportation system, the United States has its greatest opportunity to serve for the progress of the world.

Mr. Barron who, as owner of The Wall Street Journal, the Philadelphia News Bureau, the Boston News Bureau, Barron's Weekly and similar publications, is said to have a broad understanding of important developments in finance and business and their effect on international relations, feels that America need not seek to be the counting house of the world, or to control the ocean shipping lines of the world. He says, "We should hold the capital and inventive genius for the world, and a world influence for peace and prosperity. It should not seek to drive on land or sea the business of any nation to an unprofitable basis by reason of either America's massed capital or inventive genius."

VARICOSE VEINS

First let me say that those who keep normal weight and have some vigorous physical exercise every day to keep all the muscles (including the heart muscles) in good condition, seldom have varicose veins. Good muscles have a great deal to do with the circulation.

Varicose veins are veins that are stretched and dilated and twisted. They are most common in the legs and rectum. The blood current in the veins is much slower than in the arteries. The reason for the frequency of varicose in the legs may be the difficulty the blood has in going up hill from the legs to the heart.

Anything which hinders the return flow of the blood in the veins may cause them to become varicose. The local causes are tight garters, corsets and belts, and pressure from masses such as tumors and overloaded rectums, and sometimes in pregnancy. Among the general causes are heart weaknesses and certain liver disorders.

Those who are overweight are quite apt to have varicose veins, for the heart cannot pump efficiently enough to force the blood through the extra fat. They often improve markedly when the weight is reduced.

Treatment

It is usually advised to keep off the feet as much as possible, to sit and lie with the legs elevated, and to bandage snugly from the ankles or the toes to the knees. Deep massage two or three times a day will improve the circulation. (Remember what I said about the general methods of improving the circulation.)

A good bandage is made of a yard of flannel cut three inches wide on the bias, with the ends sewed together. Elastic stockings, such as may be purchased at the same supply houses, have the same effect.

Cabot states that the only permanent cure for very bad varicose veins is to have them taken out. The smaller veins pick up the circulation very much more effectively than the dilated, useless affairs.

Varicose Ulcers

Because of the poor circulation and stagnant blood, the tissues over the varicose veins are quite prone to become eczematous and break out in ulcers. If an ulcer has formed, once or twice a day it should be washed with very hot water (and soap, if it does not irritate the eczema), then for twenty minutes or so, hot applications like vaseline or lanoline, smeared like a cloth, should be applied on, and a bandage or elastic stocking put on over this. Sometimes antiseptic ointments such as boracite acid ointment should be used.

Undoubtedly the ultra violet rays would help. If you are not where you can get these, expose the ulcer (with the leg elevated) every day to the direct sunlight. Be gin with a few minutes and work up to an hour or so.

Surgery sometimes has to be used on these ulcers that have hardened scar tissues at the edges. Then perhaps skin graft covering will be necessary for healing.

Hemorrhoids or Piles

Hemorrhoids or piles are varicose veins of the rectum. Most often these are due to constipation, constant straining with diarrhea.

Constant physical taking will cause them (as it will also cause constipation.)

In the correction of the constipation does not cure them, they should be removed. The home treatment is to keep them pushed back into the rectum so they will not be pressed upon.

After a bowel movement, a tampon (plug) made from cotton or gauze and smeared with some antiseptic ointment (carbolated vase-

How to Achieve Beauty by Mme. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

MAKING THE MOST OF THE LAST LAP OF SUMMER

It almost gives me a shock to realize that we are on the last lap of summer and that it won't be long before we are wearing fur coats and shivering in front of fireplaces. There is such a wealth of beauty in this season that I hate to see it go without getting everything possible out of it. I have spent so much time telling you means of protecting your beauty against summer's hazards that I am afraid I haven't said quite enough about making these months of sunshine and fresh air give you a stock vitality and beauty that will last far into the next season.

Don't abandon your summer regime yet, but redouble your efforts to achieve beauty. Imagine yourself a human sponge in an ocean of energy. For sunlight is energy, life and beauty. Take in as much as you can through the pores of your skin and your food—the fresh fruits and vegetables. Lie on the ground or the beach and saturate yourself with it. I have told you enough about protection against the burning rays of the sun so that you can do this safely.

There is untold value in absolute relaxation, especially so in the open air. If you know how to relax, you open your whole system to the benefits of air and light. Lie prone with your head at the same level as the rest of you, stretch out full length, and then let go all your muscles and nerves until you lose consciousness of every single part of your body and simply feel the peace and restfulness of the whole.

Or go in for sports in the open air, lose yourself in the game and get the same mental relaxation that physical rest brings to your body.

In these last few weeks of summer, with the sudden desire to grasp its advantages we all feel, I shall almost forgive you if you forget your summer precautions little. Then soon I shall have to tell you how to atone for your forgivable carelessness.

SEEKS CHILDHOOD FRIENDS IN XENIA

Years ago Peter Garrity, National Military Home, Dayton, played and went to school in Westport, County Mayo, Ireland, with the O'Donnell sisters.

Later both families came to this country and Saturday Garrity came here in search of his childhood friends. He had been told that Mary, Nora and Ann O'Donnell eventually located in Xenia but the search he was able to make here was fruitless.

Now he asks that anyone who has information regarding the present whereabouts of the O'Donnell sisters communicate with him so that a longing to see the companions of his childhood days in sunny Westport may be satisfied. His address is: Peter Garrity, National Military Home, Dayton, O.

NEW YORK,

Aug. 1—

Little ironies of New York, the tolerant city:

In one of the fashionable Long Island suburbs, most of the residents work in the city and go there daily to business. Presumably they are as much of New York as actual residents.

In this same place, there lives a young girl about 17 years old; pretty, petite and blonde. Her father is a taxi-driver. The child has been persistently snubbed from the time she was five years old, partly because her father occupied so menial position, and partly because rumors began to float that the boys who entertained her of an evening did so with dubious motives.

So far as her appearance goes, she is certainly equal, if not superior, to the young male and female snobs who do their best to make her feel uncomfortable. She has that knack of dressing which belongs only to a few women of twice her age. And her manners are greatly superior to that of the girls who refuse to associate with the.

That incident occurring the other day, will serve to illustrate the point.

There were gathered on the beach of the town, a group of boys and two girls. The young woman of "ill repute" wandered over and began to chat with a few of the boys. Immediately, both of the girls announced hastily that they must leave, making no attempt to be polite about the fact that they felt the other girl to be an evil odor in their delicate nostrils.

She who was snubbed kept her composure and gave nary a sign that she knew what was taking place; although it would have been impossible not to realize what it was all about. One of the boys stayed by her side, but the other three drifted onward to where the other girls had gone. This, obviously, was a most flagrant breach of good taste.

Apparently the boys are swayed by the supposedly nice girls. Left to themselves, they would be perfectly willing to treat the girls as an equal. But conforming to the modern trend of emasculation, they are governed by the petty wishes of the girls. They are ashamed to be seen with one upon whom the rest of the feminine thumbs have been turned down.

And yet most of these girls who are so careful to associate with only the best people have absolutely no claim to exalted birth. Their parents are moderately wealthy, but many of them occupy such unostentatious positions as plumbers and coal merchants. In a democracy these subtle distinctions are hard for the intelligent person to understand.

As far as the girl's reputation is concerned there are many girls in the town whose behavior is by no means exemplary. What they do is done discreetly, and even if rumors happen to drift about, no attention is paid to them. But regardless of how true the rumors are in the latter case, the daughter of the taxi driver will be held responsible for anything that is said about her. She is doomed from birth, by reason of the pettiness of New York, called the city of tolerance.

I had thought that the city's supply of meat was slaughtered outside the city. Therefore I was surprised to see a truckful of live steers on Lexington avenue at Thirty-fifth street. My curiosity urged me to ask the driver of the truck, while it was stopped in traffic, whence came the cattle and whither bound. He explained that they were driven from New Jersey into the city so as to be killed by orthodox rabbi and thus conform to the regulations that the Hebrew faith fixes on the eating of meat.

You won't find it in guide books, but it is interesting to know:

That the most popular place for a summer night's necking, for those who have autos appears to be Pelham Bay parkway, east of the Boston Post road. There are cars by the score nightly and no cop ever seems to bother them. Elsewhere in New York, the vigilance of the police in the matter of public necking is terrifying.

That the music room in the Public library is often patronized by a group of old men, who sit and read musical scores; waving their hands to and fro enjoying the arias on paper just as much as if they were hearing them played by a symphony orchestra.

That there are four speakeasies surrounding police headquarters at Grand street and Center Market street, all of which do a rousing business with the doughty John Laws making up the greater part of the patrons.

That the area about Columbus Circle is filled with agencies of expensive foreign made cars. Such showrooms as the Hispano-Suiza, the Renault, the Citroen, the Sunbeam and so forth are always sure of attracting a crowd.

That there is a sign in all the automat restaurants reading thus: "WE CANNOT ALLOW THE USE OF OUR TABLES TO THOSE BRINGING THEIR OWN LUNCH."

Reginald Denny, the movie star, arrived in town the other day on his way to England. While here, his press agent, to prove that the last thing he desired was publicity, sent out at least one thousand words of explanation as to just why Mr. Denny wanted no notice. And after most of the papers sent reporters to interview him, and all of the sheets ran stories about his arrival, no doubt he departed thankful for the thought that he had come through the city modestly and quietly, as becomes a motion picture star.

New Reserve Hurler Leads Mates To Victory

Locals Win Behind Heavy Hitting But Play Weakly Afieid

Harold Dodson Makes Auspicious Debut As Pitcher Here

By virtue of some excellent pitching by Harold Dodson, Dayton hurling sensation, and fifteen hits off two pitchers that in a measure accounted for nine fielding errors, the Reserves muddled through to a one-sided 12 to 4 victory over the Zip and Phil Cleaners of Springfield at the Washington Park matinee Sunday.

The victory was the fourteenth registered by the Reserves this season with only three games on the debit side of the ledger. Reserves fielded wretchedly, not unlike a sandlot ball team, but this extraordinary capacity for defensive effectiveness was more than offset by terrific hitting that enabled the local nine to score in every inning but the first.

Harold Dodson, newly acquired moundsman, demonstrated his natural talent for sports includes something besides tennis and basketball. The young righthander, who recently graduated from Steele High School and more recently won the junior singles tennis crown in Dayton, had a repertoire of foibles that made him invincible. Dodson exhibited perfect control, failed to walk a man and fanned five batters. He yielded seven hits.

Most of the nine Reserve misplays were not costly, but contributed largely to the first two unearned runs scored by the Cleaners. Two errors gave Springfield a run in the first round. Krupp, leadoff man, grounded through Scott and came all the way home when on the relay throw to nip the runner at third. Cyphers failed to handle Scott's throw.

In the third Krupp tripled to right and scored on the next play when Conley muffed Brannigan's roller. Conley might be shortstop, but we doubt it, as he turned in no less than five errors during the course of the afternoon.

After his team had completed a tremendous lead, Dodson let up sufficiently to permit the visitors two consolation runs in the eighth, manufactured by Nolan's double, a single by Hughes and a two-bagger by Wren, the three hits coming with two out. McNeil was safe on Conley's error while Wren took third, but Morgan was easy for the third out.

Durnbach made a triple to deep center earlier in the same round but was out at the plate trying to stretch it into a four-base blow, although two perfect pegs and fast fielding were necessary to cut down the Reserve player.

Jug Conley and Durnbach also contributed two hits apiece. Shay, the Springfield third baseman, was the only member of his team to make two hits, both singles.

Reserves will tackle a strong team next Sunday, meeting the Springfield Millard Clothiers at Washington Park.

COMPANY L MEMBERS RETURN HOME AFTER TWO WEEKS IN CAMP

Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, returned to Xenia Saturday after being encamped at Camp Perry, O. for the past fifteen days for the annual summer training period.

Many members of the local guard unit won medals and other laurels for expert marksmanship in practice on the rifle range at the camp.

Second Lieutenant Alva R. Burger qualified as an expert rifleman by scoring the second greatest number of points obtained by any enlisted man or officer in the regiment. He recorded a score of 233 out of a possible 250.

Six other officers of the local company qualified as marksmen with automatic rifles. Captain Ozni Cornwell, commanding officer, scored 208; Sergeant Jesse D. Burgett, 207; First Sergeant Ernest J. Mangan, 200; Corporal Austin W. Gil, 192; Sergeant Herman C. Gill, 191, and Sergeant Harold E. Leamens, 190.

Private Homer C. Lancaster qualified as an automatic rifle marksman by scoring 362 out of a possible 500 points. Sergeant Herman C. Gill also qualified as a pistol marksman with 67 per cent.

Medals for excellence in range practice were presented by Governor Vic Donahay and General Nathan, commanding officer of Fifth Corps Area. Sergeant Gill will be awarded two medals at the local Armory Monday night.

Members of the guard unit enjoyed themselves while at camp, while at the same time the training period proved of educational value. The mornings were devoted to drill and the afternoons were spent with all forms of organized athletics.

YOUNG WOMAN DEAD

SANDUSKY, O., Aug. 1.—Miss Mary Uncle, 20, was killed and several others were injured when a touring car, with seven passengers, left the road on a curve, turned over twice and landed upside down. Ernest Stuckey, driver of the car, was arrested and is being held pending the coroner's report.

HUGE ENTRY LIST NOMINATED FOR GREENE COUNTY FAIR RACES

Racing at the 1927 edition of the Greene County Fair this week should go down in local history as a year in which some of the most interesting sport of all time was witnessed, in view of the great number of first class horses nominated for the meet.

Exactly 139 entries have been received for the six races and the entry list has not been padded.

Twenty-nine horses are scheduled to start in the 2:22 pace opening day, fourteen colts are nominated for the three-year-old and under trot, and ten pacers are entered in the 2:14 pace for the Greene County Lumber Co. $500 purse.

On the second day of the meeting, eleven racers are named for the 2:18 trot, eleven juveniles for the three-year-old and under pace, and seven horses will race in the 2:14 trot.

Twelve of the most speedy pacers in this part of the country are to start in the Free-For-All pace for the Nat Hunter $500 purse on the closing day. Twenty-nine trotters are to engage in the 2:22 trot with sixteen pacers in the closing feature, the 2:18 pace. Entry list follows:

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

A good old letter from the gang makes Patsy homesick with a bang.

Patsy and Marty had just returned to their cabin from their morning swim when they found this letter waiting for them. It was from the gang at home and they knew from the hand writing that Betty Ann had written it, but they were sure that Rag, Tag and Bill had had something to do with it. As Patsy suggested, Betty Ann had probably acted as stenographer while the boys dictated it to her.

The letter sounded like home to rest of us over your letters. We show him all the pictures you send and he still asks about that picture of the perch catch that Marty promised to send. Betty Ann calls him her Ritzie postman and, though he doesn't know what it means, he seems to like it.

The only exciting thing that's happened in Mayville since you've been away, was that Jimmy Perkins fell in the creek. That's what he gets for being so stingy with his sailboat. He won't let anybody ride in it, so it served him right. He didn't get hurt, only mussed up his white, starchy clothes.

Fluffy-tail seems very happy with her tree-house. For a squirrel she's pretty smart. Betty has taught her to come when you whistle and she eats out of your hand just as nice as Trinky.

Rag has been taking Trinky to bed with him nights. He said he did it at first because he thought Trinky would be lonesome for his bed in the carpenter shop, but the rest of us think it was just an excuse to have the dog with him.

We haven't staged a Ritzie affair since you left, even though we have added $3 to the treasury with our minnow sales. We've thought about giving the neighborhood a picnic or something, but without Patsy to write the invitations and Marty to see that things go off all right, we felt rather lost.

We will all be glad to have you back home again. Be sure to tell us when you're coming. If you drive through the Indian reservation on your way home, be sure to take some pictures. It would be great to have them for our clubroom.

Patsy, and she was homesick before Marty had finished the first paragraph.

Dear Patsy and Marty:

Guess it's about time that the stay-at-homers were doing a little writing, too. We've been eating up every word of your letters and living over again your thrilling experiences in the woods.

We all get together in the carpenter shop and read the letters out loud. Betty Ann has told the postman all about your being away and now he gets as excited as the rest of us over your letters.

Yours, Bill, Rag and Tag.

"Why the tears?" asked Marty, looking up from the letter.

"Oh, I don't know," sniffed Patsy. "It just seems so good to hear from the kids. It won't be so bad to break camp when we know that our fellow Ritzies at home are so anxious to see us, will it, Marty?"

"No, it won't," answered her brother. "You know I think I'd rather be a Ritzie than a Canadian guide!"

"WON'T you dance with me now?"

Millie's friend, Davidson, asked, smiling down at her.

Sally could feel his gray eyes going over her face. They seemed, somehow, to be stroking it like caressing fingers. They moved on over her neck to her slender, light figure.

She moved away from him an inch or two. She hated to be looked at like that by a man.

"Don't you want to dance with me?" he was asking her now, and she shook her head and looked around for Ted. Surely he had had plenty of time to get her wraps from the check-room.

"No, I don't want to dance any more tonight. The floor's so crowded," she answered, looking up at him.

"I'm here with Ted Sloan who remembers him, don't you?—and we just decided to go home."

"No, I don't remember him," the big blond man answered, bluntly, never taking his eyes from her. "The only person I remember meeting at your house was yourself."

Sally's color deepened and stirred.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, quickly changing the subject.

She really wondered, too, what Davidson was doing in a place like the Blue Lagoon, which was a haunt of the young and gay and poor, and where dances cost but a nickel a piece.

Surely he didn't belong here, with his fine linen shirt, his expensive-looking clothes, and the gold cigarette case that he fiddled with as he talked.

He belonged to another world—a world of high-powered cars, road-houses that had to cover charge and private dining rooms, tailor-made clothes and chased-silver liquor flasks. Anyone could tell that by looking at him.

Then, too, Sally knew that he never had taken Millie to places like the Blue Lagoon in the days when she had run around with him.

"Oh, I just dropped in on my way home from a card-game," he said, indifferently. "I do, sometimes. Been doing any more cooking lately?" His face lighted up as he asked her that.

"Any more cooking?" cried Sally. "Why, I cook every day of my life. Where do you suppose Ted can be?" Let's go and look him up!"

They started to push their way through the laughing, noisy crowd, his hand on Sally's arm above the elbow, and his big body close to hers as they moved.

"I wish you'd ask me up some night for supper," he said, in her ear. "I haven't had a real home-cooked meal for so many years that I can't remember. Will you?"

Once more she shook her small, beautifully-shaped head. "No, you're Millie's friend, and she'll have to ask you," she answered, with a little laugh. "She'd give me a terrible wigging if I had anything to do with any of her men friends. Let me tell you. Besides, it wouldn't be quite fair, would it?"

Then, just as they found Ted, who was trying to sell a perspiring, fat young man an automobile, he asked her a second question.

"How does a girl like Millie Jerome have a sister like you?"

Sally didn't answer that one. To begin with, she did not clearly understand what he meant by it. And besides, Davidson did not seem to be asking for a reply. He seemed to be talking to himself, as much as to her.

All the way home through the warm October night, Sally thought that question over.

But she couldn't figure out what he meant, so finally she let it go at that.

"What does it matter, anyway?" she asked herself, and promptly put both it and Davidson himself out of her mind.

The night was starry and beautiful. She loved to ride along like this, with the wind singing in her ears and the steady hum of the motor lulling her senses.

To loll back in her seat with her hands folded and her cheek against the smooth leather of the cushions—with nothing to do until tomorrow morning. Nothing to do.

Sally signed comfortably and fell asleep.

Ted's voice wakened her. He had put one arm around her and was saying something about being "the champion one-armed driver in the United States."

"Oh, no, you're not! Not tonight, anyway!" Sally informed him, with a smile, and put his hand back on the driving wheel, where it belonged.

"That reminds me. I owe you two dollars for the first payment on Beau's check," she added, fishing in her little purse for two one-dollar bills, that she had folded there that afternoon.

Without a word Ted took them. He raced his car all the rest of the way home, and did not say "Good-night" when he left her—not at her door, but at his own on the first floor.

Millie was having a midnight lunch and listening to the radio in the dining room when Sally walked into the flat.

"I'm just having the most awful time with Beau!" she began, hotly, not looking at Sally as she talked. "He got paid yesterday noon, and last night at 5 o'clock, he sailed in with half of his salary gone. He knows a bookmaker, and he'd been playing the races. He picked the wrong horse, of course. You'd just know he would! And he wears so many clean clothes! You should have seen our laundry bill this week, and I had to pay it! What he had left last night he spent on a quart of liquor and a big tin of cigarettes."

"He's always spent his money that way. I've told you a thousand times," Sally spoke gravely, her compassionate, understanding eyes on the unhappy face beside her.

"I know you have! But I never believed you 'till yesterday," Mabel answered, frankly. "You see, I was so much in love with him—"

"Aren't you still?" interrupted Sally. "You've been married only a week, you know."

Mabel put her head down on her knees and began to cry.

"Sure, I'm in love with him," she wept. "Do you think I'd stay with him, and pay his board bill and his laundry bill if I didn't love him? I spent every nickel of my salary except five dollars yesterday, Sally, settling up for the week—I tell you, we're just up against it!"

Very slowly Sally opened her little gray leather handbag, and took out a five-dollar bill from it. She knew what she was expected to do, and she did it.

"I can only lend you this, Mahey," she said, folding it into Mabel's eager little paw. "Mother was going to buy you a wedding present, but I'll try to persuade her to give you the money instead. And then you'll have to pay this money back to me. I'm sorry, but I've got to have it again."

"Sure, I'll pay it back! You know I will." And Mabel jumped up, brushed the tears from her eyes, gave her skirts a shake, and was herself again!

"You're a sweet cookie!" she declared, flatteredly, and hid the money in the top of her rolled stocking.

MRS. D. S. HARNER IS CALLED SUNDAY

Mrs. Lavina S. Harner, 85, wife of D. S. Harner, died at her home on the Fairground Road, Sunday night at 10:45 o'clock. She had been failing in health some time and was confined to her bed six weeks.

Mrs. Harner was born near Clifton, December 5, 1842, and spent all of her life in Greene County. Her marriage to Mr. Harner took place November 23, 1865.

Besides her husband, two children, survive: C. B. Harner, Xenia and Mrs. William H. Grotendick, near Xenia. Two other children preceded her in death. Six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Isabelle Bower, Arcanum, and Mrs. Nora Solomon, Lima, O.

Mrs. Harner was a member of the Reformed Church. Funeral services will be held at the home, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in Woodland Cemetery.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. GOLDIE S. BIXLER

Mrs. Goldie Spencer Bixler, former resident of Xenia, died suddenly Saturday afternoon at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Dayton. The exact cause of her death was expected to be determined Monday, when the pathological report on the contents of her organs was to have been made by Dr. P. H. O'Gara, attending physician.

Mrs. Bixler was found unconscious and in convulsions at her home Wednesday and was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, where she died. Death was produced from meningitis, Dr. O'Hara believed.

She leaves two brothers, Lewis Spencer, Xenia and Isaac Craven, Hamilton and one sister, Mrs. Olga Cates, Dayton.

Funeral services will be held at the residence, 25 Caroline St., Dayton, Tuesday, with interment in Woodland Cemetery, Xenia. The casket will be opened for friends to view the remains.

urday, according to R. E. Dunkel, clerk of the board.

This printing firm submitted a bid of $19.25, which was the only bid received by the board.

SACCO TO CONTINUE
HIS HUNGER STRIKE
AS DECISION PENDS

Governor Will File Result Of Review Wednesday Night

BOSTON, Aug. 1.—Nicola Sacco entered the sixteenth day of his hunger strike today in state's prison with his mental condition becoming hourly of graver concern.

Sacco's fellow prisoner, Bartolomeo Vanzetti, who has also been on a self-imposed fast broke it yesterday, taking milk, coffee, meat cakes and bread. For breakfast Vanzetti had milk, coffee and bread, the fifteen days with only one meal not having done him any visible harm.

The hunger strike of the two men was in protest against the alleged secret method employed by Governor Alvan T. Fuller in reviewing the case of Sacco and Vanzetti accused of slaying a South Braintree paymaster and his guard, and doomed to die in the electric chair August 10th.

Governor Fuller rounds up today his investigation by hearing the last witness in the state house.

While completing the writing of his decision, the chief executive is in close touch with Phillips House, Massachusetts' general hospital, where his son Alvan T. Jr. has been under the surgeon's knife for appendicitis. He is reported to be "making an uneven convalescence." This message cheered the governor and made possible the filing of the governor's momentous decision by the tentative date, Wednesday night.

The two accused men were not shifted to the death cells in the state prison as is customary ten days before an execution. Neither will they be moved.

Madefors, who can have a voice for which Sacco and Jenkins were convicted, and Jenkins' death for a bank of all financing. Madefors was sentenced to die August 10th.

Morbid curios were kept from the vicinity of the state prison to-day by a special detail of police.

Visitors were barred from the institution. Vehicles were not allowed to park in the vicinity of the prison.

JENKINS GETS POSITION AT WILBERFORCE

COLUMBUS, Aug. 1.—Carl Jenkins, Columbus, employed in the secretary of state's office, was appointed business manager of Wilberforce University, Monday afternoon.

The appointment was approved by the state board of control. Jenkins will succeed Theodore Carter, as business manager. R. C. Bundy will remain superintendent of the institution.

GUNS OF GANGLAND CLAIM NEW VICTIM

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—The guns of gangland, which have blazed death to seventeen victims with the last few weeks, probably will add another to the toll today as Joseph Barba lay dying in a hospital with a dozen bullet slugs in his body.

Barba, said by police to be "in the racket," was shot as he stood at a street intersection.

WOMAN IS DROWNED

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 1.—Funeral services were being arranged here today for Mrs. Anna Thompson, 49, who was drowned in Buckeye Lake, near here, when she stumbled and fell from a boat pier into the lake. Her husband, Roy W. Thompson, dived after her and was almost drowned himself when the frantic woman seized him and dragged him under. Miss Anna Thompson, niece of the couple rescued her uncle with a boat.

HOLD AUTO DRIVER

AKRON, O., Aug. 1.—County authorities today were holding Axel Ross, 35, on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, in connection with the death of Mrs. Rose Larish, 50, of Hudson and Ernest Blosser, 16, of Akron, who were killed late last night when the automobile plunged into a pond near Hudson. Six others were injured. The car was almost completely submerged.

COLORFUL CAREER OF LINCOLN C. ANDREWS BROUGHT TO CLOSE

Governor Will File Result Of Review Wednesday Night

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The colorful public career of a military man who tried to dry up the United States, officially came to a close today when former Lieutenant Governor Seymour Lowman, of New York, was sworn in as assistant secretary of the treasury to succeed General Lincoln C. Andrews, once "M. P." chief of the A. E. F.

Lowman, who has been functioning as acting dry czar for several weeks, has discarded many of the policies of his predecessor, although the decentralization of prohibition authority, developed by Andrews, has been retained.

Officially Lowman has declared for enforcement of the prohibition law in its entirety, whereas Andrews frankly announced that the federal government cannot go after hip-flask toters and other small violators.

From the standpoint of practical application, however, Lowman's policy will be much like that of Andrews. The new prohibition machine will attack the smugglers, the arch conspirators and other big violators first. If there's any money, men or energy left over, the little fellows may land in federal jails.

ENTRIES FOR $35,000 DOLE AIR RACE MUST BE ALL IN TUESDAY

Seven Flyers Already Entered—Inexperienced Pilots And Unfit Planes Will Be Barred From Race

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—Entries for the $35,000 Dole air race to Hawaii on August 12 must be in by tomorrow, the local chapter of the National Aeronautical Association warned today.

Seven flyers are already entered in the race to win the $25,000 and $10,000 prizes offered by James Dole, Hawaiian millionaire, for the first and second airmen to reach Honolulu in the long competitive hop. One or two more entrants were expected today and tomorrow.

Meanwhile, government officials indicated that the department of commerce would carefully for all planes entered in the flight to guard against possible tragedy if improperly equipped machines or unregistered pilots attempted the 2400-mile hop.

PRINCESS HELEN IS TAKING SOME BLAME FOR CAROL'S EXILE

Admits Leaving Her Consort Before He Began Scandal

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Princess Helen, wife of Prince Carol and the mother of King Michael, the five year old ruler of Rumania, has written to Carol recently, admitting a great part of the responsibility for the present exile of the former crown prince. It was revealed today to International News Service. Helen is said to have asked Carol's forgiveness.

International News Service, through information just obtained, is in a position to give the authentic story of Carol's abdication for ten years, which followed his complete estrangement from Princess Helen.

Princess Helen left Carol before the present scandal developed, going to visit her mother and forcing Carol to follow her. She declared she intended to obtain a divorce.

Carol came to Paris and Helen wrote to him later asking him not to return to Rumania, declaring that she never wanted to see him again.

Carol met Mme. Lupescu in Paris and accompanied her later to Italy where he received a command from Premier Bratiano to return to Rumania forthwith and admit wrong, doing publicly or abdicate his right of succession to the Rumanian throne.

Carol hot headedly chose the latter course as demonstrating clearly he was not ashamed of his actions. He believed, in view of his break with his wife, that he had done nothing for which he should ask forgiveness.

PETITIONS AGAINST BILL CIRCULATED

LONDON, Aug. 1.—J. Ogden Armour, who is ill in the Carlton Hotel here, is "about the same" today. Mrs. Armour told the International News Service.

Asked when her husband would be able to leave his bed, Mrs. Armour said, "it may be in two weeks or it may be two months or perhaps even longer."

Petitions seeking a referendum on the salaried justice of the peace bill sponsored by State Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia, are being circulated in Xenia and Greene County.

Ohio State Automobile Clubs are behind the referendum movement in the hope of obtaining sufficient signatures to prevent the law being placed in operation August 10.

LAWYERS IN EFFORT TO SETTLE DISPUTE INVOLVING AIMEE

Adjustment Of Temple Finances Needed To Create Peace

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 1.—Lawyers acting for Aimee Semple McPherson, the evangelist, and for her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, were prepared to meet today in another conference to settle the bitter personal and financial quarrel between the two founders of the million-dollar Angelus temple here.

"Mother" Kennedy was ousted from control of temple finances by her daughter last week, upon Aimee's return from a revival campaign in the east. Since then they have banded threats and personalities. The estrangement reached a climax on Saturday when "Ma" Kennedy twice gave her famous daughter the cut direct.

Amidst settlement of the family feud will depend upon a satisfactory adjustment of temple finances, it was believed. Mrs. Kennedy is understood to be insisting on a 50-50 division of the wealth she and her daughter accumulated in their five years of religious work in Los Angeles.

Attendance at Angelus temple has been stimulated by the publicity given the pastor's quarrel with her mother, just as a year ago Aimee spoke to overflow crowds upon her return from a supposed Mexican kidnapping. Sunday services at the temple were heard by a capacity congregation of 5,000 persons.

STILLMAN AND HIS BRIDE BEGIN TOUR

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Bud Stillman and his bride, the former Lena Wilson, sailed early today for Europe aboard the White Star liner Olympic.

James A. Stillman, Sr., was on board to say farewell. He left just before the vessel sailed. Hailing a friend on the pier, he explained with an airy wave of the hand, "Just down to see my kids off."

Bud freely told reporters of the plans of himself and his bride.

"We are going first to Paris. I'm taking my car, and we'll motor through Europe. We expect to be away five months. I don't expect to study medicine at Harvard next year, for I'll probably spend a year in travel and will begin my medical course a year later."

The young bride looked extremely attractive in a brown and gold costume, a tight little brown hat and a white silk scarf tipped with orange around her throat.

MAKES FIRST START FROM LINER'S DECK ON SPECIAL RUNWAY

Trans-Ocean Flyer Again Contributes To Air History

ABOARD S. S. LEVIATHAN, Aug. 1.—Despite early rain and fog Clarence Chamberlin made new history in transportation today when he took off in an airplane from the deck of the S. S. Leviathan, thus being the first man to test the feasibility of disembarking passengers from ocean liners at sea.

Chamberlin's hop-off at 8:14 was a marvelous success. His plane took the air when it was still thirty feet from the end of the runway constructed across the deck of the ship.

After taking the air Chamberlin landed over the Leviathan and accompanying destroyers and then headed for the Long Island coast a few miles distant.

General Manager Burke, of the U. S. Lines, and President Dalton, of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, who witnessed the take-off, declared the use of airplanes on ocean liners will reduce the time of passage between Europe and the United States by forty-eight hours.

CURTIS FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Clarence Chamberlin, New York to German flyer, landed at the flying field here this morning after demonstrating successfully the feasibility of taking off from a liner at sea. Chamberlin hopped off from the Leviathan, below Fire Island, at 8:14 a. m.

Chamberlin had intended to fly to his home field in Teterboro, N. J., but due to heavy for he decided to land here on Long Island.

He will fly to Teterboro as soon as the weather clears. The plane made a successful landing.

The Leviathan was 120 miles down the harbor when Chamberlin took off from a specially constructed runway on the upper deck. He made the trip to the field here in one hour and sixteen minutes.

The flight—first commercial ship-to-shore hop in history—was undertaken to show that mail and passengers may be brought by plane from some distance at sea, cutting from twenty-four to forty-eight hours from the length of trans-Atlantic travel.

Chamberlin was able to take off again a short time after landing here, the weather having cleared, and flew back to Teterboro, where he landed at 10:55.

In 1904, Travis gained the British amateur golf championship at Sandwich, England, defeating E. Blackwell in the finals, 4 and 3.

He was the first American to win this title.

Travis held his prominence in the golfing world until 1914 when he was semi-finalist in the United States amateur event, but never won another championship.

Born in Maldon, Victoria, Australia, January 10, 1862, Travis came to the United States when he was twenty-one years of age. He was employed by a New York importing firm until his great success in golf.

He appeared in his usual good health Saturday, Mrs. Jenkins said, and the sudden attack of dementia is thought to have been induced by the heat, since the aged man had been hoeing in the garden.

He was the father of ten children, eight of whom are living. The body was removed to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Hatfield at Reesville for funeral services.

Coroner Chambliss will hold a verbal inquest into the suicide, he said Monday.

Driscoll had been visiting at the Jenkins home six weeks, but had made his home with another daughter, Mrs. J. A. Hatfield, Reesville, Clinton County. He was a native of Highland County but spent practically his entire life in Clinton County.

PARIS DOUBLES BACK ON FASHION TRAIL

French fashion designers are endeavoring to increase the lengths of skirts, in order to meet criticism of churchmen and to increase the consumption of dress materials. Having failed in their attempt to banish the abbreviated skirt entirely, they are now trying, by the addition of trailing trimmings, to simulate length. The pictures show how fashion is doubling back on its trail. Contrasted with three new Paris designs are two creations of a decade ago.

NEW YORK TRANSIT STRIKE AVERTED

On the eve of what promised to be the greatest transit tie-up in its history New York breathed a sigh of relief when it was announced that after a series of conferences with Mayor Walker the labor leaders had called off the strike and promised that there would be no interference with subway or elevated traffic until the city's plan for a co-ordinated system had been presented. This picture shows Hugh Frayne, A. F. of L. organizer; J. H. Coleman and Patrick J. Shea, in conference with Mayor Walker, and inset, Frank Hedley, president of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, on the bicycle he had stowed away in case of trouble.

CINDERELLA FINDS A PRINCE

For many years Gertrude Gruen took dictation every day from her boss, Solomon N. Oppenheimer, millionaire real estate man of New York. That's all over now, and Gertrude is on her way to Europe for a honeymoon, as "the rich Mrs. Oppenheimer." This snapshot was made as the couple left the rectory of St. Patrick's Cathedral, after the marriage ceremony.

Elusive Hero

After George Teames, thirteen, of Inglewood, Cal., saved a train from being wrecked, he disappeared, and his heroism only became public after railroad detectives sought him out. He is a Boy Scout and probably will receive the organization's highest life-saving honors. George raced a mile to warn an approaching train of a broken rail.

HENDERSHOT-GANOE REUNIONS LAUNCHED.

The first Hendershot-Ganoe reunion was held Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William DeHaven and family, south of Xenia. The day was spent with games and music. A delicious basket dinner was enjoyed on the lawn. Fifty members of the two families attended.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hendershot and two granddaughters, Eugene and Esther Pleasant Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Hughes and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Linkhart and family, Mrs. Ola Linkhart and son, James and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cline, all of Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. John Ganoe, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Ganoe and family, Lumberton; Mr. and Mrs. David Dodd and family, New Vienna; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Cline, near Jamestown; Mr. and Mrs. Loren Whittington and family, Mr. and Mrs. William DeHaven and family, Xenia; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Holland, Spring Valley.

The next reunion will be held the last Sunday of July, 1928, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ganoe, Lumberton.

MARRIED QUIETLY SOLEMNIZED SATURDAY.

Miss Barbara Schwiebold, elder daughter of Mrs. Edward Schwiebold, High St., and Mr. Herbert Mollage, W. Second St., were married at the parsonage of the First Lutheran Church, the Rev. Dr. Culver, Springfield, former Xenia Pastor officiating, Saturday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schwiebold, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, witnessed the single ring ceremony. The bride was attired in an ensemble of blue, with light footwear.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Mollage left Monday on a short wedding trip. They will reside for the present with the bride's mother. Mrs. Mollage is employed at Jobe Brothers Store. Mr. Mollage is employed by the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school, I finally had to quit school. I was so weak, I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books and can tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me." — Mrs. Frank Sellers, 519 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

STRIVING FOR NEW RECORDS

It appears we have a new flagpole sitting champion. A Chicago man has climbed down after spending 16 days and some hours on top of a pole. Various persons in other parts of the country are already setting in an attempt to hatch out a new record.

This freak contest is only the latest. We have had marathon piano players, endurance dancers, champion hog-callers, hot-dog eaters, coffee drinkers, rope skippers. We expect to hear any time that some humble bill collector is claiming the world's championship for long-distance skidding on his left ear, or that a red-haired man with one leg is starting out to hop farther than any other red-haired man with one leg has ever hopped.

In fact, if the participants in freak events of recent years were to be laid end to end, they would reach from here to Medicine Hat. Some folks, may be in favor of laying them thus and leaving them there.

This is too harsh. Vanity and ambition—to be noticed, to be somebody, to make a name and a fortune and a career, to be Babe Ruth instead of a sandlot player—these motives move most Americans to some extent at least.

Why shouldn't people sit on flag-poles or do any other biggest, longest, most foolish stunt in the country where some states send their biggest windjammers or biggest spenders to the Senate and the heaviest homewrecker makes more money and has more admirers than a president?

Why, we expect to hear any time that some patriotic billionaire is moving Mt. Everest to the United States so we may have the biggest mountain.

CONTROLLING THE WORLD

Clarence W. Barron, dean of financial newspaper publishers, inauguates the forty-first year since the founding of his first financial paper, the Boston News Bureau, with an article in his financial weekly predicting forty years of material progress ahead for the United States, surpassing the forty years just past.

The seventy-two-year-old financial genius believes that with our Federal Reserve System and with our transportation system, the United States has its greatest opportunity to serve for the progress of the world.

Mr. Barron who, as owner of The Wall Street Journal, the Philadelphia News Bureau, the Boston News Bureau, Barron's Weekly and similar publications, is said to have a broad understanding of important developments in finance and business and their effect on international relations, feels that America need not seek to be the counting house of the world, or to control the ocean shipping lines of the world. He says, "We should hold the capital and inventive genius for the world, and a world influence for peace and prosperity. It should not seek to drive on land or sea the business of any nation to an unprofitable basis by reason of either America's massed capital or inventive genius."

The Way of the World

WHAT IS AN INCOME?

News dispatches tell of a millionaire who commits suicide because of ill health. It is better to be well than wealthy. Riches can feed and clothe. They can not cure. What is an income if you have no days to spend it in? An income of unspent days ahead, a job, and moderation in all things—that's the best kind of an income...

SELF PITY

How can folks pity themselves when they have daily so many reminders of tribulations that are worse? No one with something to do, and health and opportunity to do it, ought ever to pity himself.

WHAT IS YOUR PHILOSOPHY?

Here and there we find a man or woman who says he has worked out a philosophy of life. He may think about it, talk about it, write about it. The question is, does he try it on himself and does it work? Your so-called philosophy of life is no good if it won't hold water when it rains.

THINKING LARGE THOUGHTS

There is a great deal of new-thoughtism and pollyannism in the world which is little more than a bookish attempt to hide the facts of life or to hide from the facts of life. On the other hand, if we are to better our estate, in whatever way, it is vital to think as large as we can. Tennyson speaks of "mighty hopes that make us men."

We must have mighty hopes if we are to make even a little improvement. With a little improvement, we have made preparations for great improvement.

THE IMPROVIDENT HOUSEWIFE

THE strawberries were plentiful—I thought that there would be supplies of them so bountiful! There'd be enough for me!

"I'll buy them in a week or two"—

This was my hazy plan.

And now—whatever shall I do?

There's not one box to can!

The pineapples slipped by me—

There's none for sale, alas!

My pet preserves—what folly!

I cannot make one glass!

Next year will see me with my pence

Close to the market planted.

With housewifely improvidence I took too much for granted!

Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly
BARTENDERS AS MASTER SALES MEN

Many a modern store clerk might have learned much of good salesmanship from watching the methods of an old-fashioned bartender.

One of the penalties of prohibition is that the bartender's kind of cleverness in salesmanship seems likely to be lost.

If, as often happened in the old days before prohibition, when men still drank in toxicants, a bartender was busy serving other shoppers when you sought to give an order, he had a subtle way of letting you know that he would wait on you soon. Perhaps he didn't say anything, and didn't even nod. But he could nevertheless look in your direction with a facial expression which bade you welcome and which assured you that your wants would soon be cared for.

Having accepted your order, the bartender proceeded to fill it in a workmanlike manner. You never felt that the bartender was slighting you because busy. To serve you seemed to be a real pleasure.

Light-heartedly he went from one spot to another, from counter to shelf, and back again, in search of goods suitable for your individual needs. He might examine a drink with something akin to motherly vigilance, reach for a spoon and remove a little speck when, as a matter of fact, there wasn't any speck there at all. I think his idea was just to impress a customer that no goods left his hands until they approached perfection.

If the hour were slack and not enough customers present to keep the bartender occupied in serving them, he briskly polished glasses and rearranged them on his shelves where they might gleam in their spotless cleanliness—just by way of showing interest in his work.

I often am reminded of bartenders when I go into a haberdasher to buy what I think I want and the clerk seeks to sell me what he says I ought to have.

A competent bartender never showed the spirit of half-amused toleration so often encountered in other retail establishments. And he seemed willing to let his goods sell themselves. It was almost unheard of to hear a bartender say, after you had consumed, say a cocktail: "Now hadn't you better try one of our gin rickies?" Or, "Are you needing any highballs today?"

He was too good a salesman for that.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters M.D.

VARICOSE VEINS

First let me say that those who keep normal weight and have some vigorous physical exercise every day to keep all the muscles (including the heart muscles) in good condition, seldom have varicose veins. Good muscles have a great deal to do with the circulation.

Varicose veins are veins that are stretched and dilated and twisted. They are most common in the legs and rectum. The blood current in the veins is much slower than in the arteries. The reason for the frequency of varicosity in the legs may be the difficulty the blood has in going up hill from the legs to the heart.

Anything which hinders the return flow of the blood in the veins may cause them to become varicose. The local causes are tight garters, corsets and belts, and pressure from masses such as tumors and overloaded rectums, and sometimes in pregnancy. Among the general causes are heart weakness and certain liver disorders.

Those who are overweight are quite apt to have varicose veins, for the heart cannot pump efficiently enough to force the blood through the extra fat. They often improve markedly when the weight is reduced.

Treatment

It is usually advised to keep off the feet as much as possible, to sit and lie with the legs elevated, and to bandage snugly from the ankles or the toes to the knees. Deep massage two or three times a day will improve the circulation. (Remember what I said about the general methods of improving the circulation.)

A good bandage is made of a yard of flannel cut three inches wide on the bias, with the ends sewed together. Elastic stockings, such as may be purchased at the surgical supply houses, should be used.

Cabot states that the only permanent cure for very bad varicose veins is to have them taken out. The smaller veins pick out the circulation very much more effectively than the dilated, useless affords.

If the hour were slack and not enough customers present to keep the bartender occupied in serving them, he briskly polished glasses and rearranged them on his shelves where they might gleam in their spotless cleanliness—just by way of showing interest in his work.

Surgery sometimes has to be used on these ulcers that have hardened scar tissues at the edges. Then perhaps skin graft covering will be necessary for healing.

Hemorrhoids or Piles
Hemorrhoids or piles are varicose veins of the rectum. Most often these are due to constipation, perhaps alternating with diarrhea. Constant physic taking will cause them (as it will also cause constipation.)

If the correction of the constipation does not cure them, they should be removed. The home treatment is to keep them pushed back into the rectum so they will not be pressed upon.

How to Achieve Beauty by Mme. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

MAKING THE MOST OF THE LAST LAP OF SUMMER

It almost gives me a shock to realize that we are on the last lap of summer and that it won't be long before we are wearing fur coats in front of fireplaces. There is such a wealth of beauty in this season that I hate to see it go without getting everything possible out of it.

I have spent so much time telling you means of protecting your beauty against summer hazards that I am afraid I haven't said quite enough about making these months of sunshine and fresh air give you a stock vitality and beauty that will last far into the next season.

Don't abandon your summer regime yet, but redouble your efforts to achieve beauty. Imagine yourself a human sponge in an ocean of energy. For sunlight is energy, life and beauty. Take in as much as you can through the pores of your skin and your food—the fresh fruits and vegetables.

Lie on the ground or the beach and saturate yourself with it. I have told you enough about protection against the burning rays of the sun so that you can do this safely.

There is untold value in absolute relaxation, especially so in the open air. If you know how to relax, you open your whole system to the benefits of air and light. Lie prone with your head at the same level as the rest of you, stretch out full length, and then let go all your muscles and nerves until you lose consciousness of every single part of your body and simply feel the peace and restfulness of the whole.

Go in for sports in the open air, lose yourself in the game and get the same mental relaxation that physical rest brings to your body.

In these last few weeks of summer, with the sudden desire to grasp its advantages we all feel, I shall almost forgive you if you forget your summer precautions a little. Then soon I shall have to tell you how to tone for your forgivable carelessness.

We have articles on Constipation and Balanced Diet which you may have by sending a self-addressed envelope with request. If you desire more than one article, better send a large envelope, doubly stamped, and if you want the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, also enclose a two-cent stamp extra.

Tomorrow: Morbid Fear of Cancer

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADRESSED envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamp extra.

Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.—Lulu Hunt Peters.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Little ironies of New York, the tolerant city:

In one of the fashionable Long Island suburbs, most of the residents work in the city and go there daily to business. Presumably they are as much of New York as actual residents.

In this same place, there lives a young girl about 17 years old; pretty, petite and blonde. Her father is a taxi-driver. The child has been persistently snubbed from the time she was five years old, partly because her father occupied so menial position, and partly because rumors began to float that the boys who entertained her of an evening did so with dubious motives.

So far as her appearance goes, she is certainly equal, if not superior, to the young male and female snobs who do their best to make her feel uncomfortable. She has that knack of dressing which belongs only to a few women of twice her age. And her manners are greatly superior to that

LOCALS WIN BEHIND
HEAVY HITTING BUT
PLAY WEAKLY AFIELD

Harold Dodson Makes Auspicious Debut As Pitcher Here

By virtue of some excellent pitching by Harold Dodson, Dayton hurling sensation, and fifteen hits off two pitchers that in a measure accounted for nine fielding errors, the Reserves muddled through to a one-sided 12 to 4 victory over the Zip and Phil Cleaners of Springfield at the Washington Park matinee Sunday.

The victory was the fourteenth registered by the Reserves this season with only three games on the debit side of the ledger.

Reserves fielded wretchedly, not unlike a sandlot ball team, but this extraordinary capacity for defensive ineffectiveness was more than offset by terrific hitting that enabled the local nine to score in every inning but the first.

Harold Dodson, newly acquired moundsman, demonstrated his natural talent for sports includes something besides tennis and basketball. The young righthander, who recently graduated from Steele High School and more recently won the junior singles tennis crown in Dayton, had a repertoire of foibles that made him invincible. Dodson exhibited perfect control, failed to walk a man and fanned five batters. He yielded seven hits.

Most of the nine Reserve misplays were not costly but contributed largely to the first two unearned runs scored by the Cleaners. Two errors gave Springfield a run in the first round, Krupp, leadoff man, grounded through Scott and came all the way home when on the relay throw to the runner at third, Cyphers failed to handle Scott's throw.

In the third Krupp tripled to right and scored on the next play when Conley muffed Brannigan's roller. Conley may be a shortstop, but we doubt it, as he turned in no less than five errors during the course of the afternoon.

After his team had compiled a tremendous lead, Dodson let up sufficiently to permit the visitors two consolation runs in the eighth, manufactured by Nolan's double, a single by Hughes and a two-bagger by Wren, the three hits coming with two out. McNeil was safe on Conley's error while Wren took third, but Morgan was easy for the runner at third.

Dodson, besides pitching a sterling 30 of ball, had a perfect Louise Egg his team in this 12-4 victory, added three hits, days before he, and drew a wimpy-cut of the plate.

He has a voice in Scott were met.

Jenkins will a home run in all of his grandiosities drive to state depart the fence, Durnham made a triple to deep center earlier in the same round but was out at the plate trying to stretch it into a four-base blow, although two perfect pegs and fast fielding were necessary to cut down the Reserve player.

Jug Conley and Durnbaugh also contributed two hits apiece. Shay, Springfield third baseman, was the only member of his team to make two hits, both singles.

Reserves will tackle a strong team next Sunday, meeting the Springfield Millard Clothiers at Washington Park.

COMPANY L MEMBERS RETURN HOME AFTER TWO WEEKS IN CAMP

Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, returned to Xenia Saturday after being encamped at Camp Perry, O. for the past fifteen days for the annual summer training period.

Many members of the local guard unit won medals and other awards for expert marksmanship in practice on the rifle range at the camp.

Second Lieutenant Alva R. Burgett qualified as an expert rifleman by scoring the second greatest number of points obtained by any enlisted man or officer in the regiment. He recorded a score of 233 out of a possible 250.

Six other officers of the local company qualified as marksmen with automatic rifles. Captain Orville Cornwell, commanding officer, scored 208; Sergeant Jesse D. Burgett, 207; First Sergeant Ernest J. Mangan, 200; Corporal Austin G. Gill, 192; Sergeant Herman C. Gill, 191, and Sergeant Harold E. Leamens, 190.

Private Homer C. Lancaster qualified as an automatic rifle marksman by scoring 362 out of a possible 500 points. Sergeant Herman C. Gill also qualified as a pistol marksman with 67 per cent.

Medals for excellence in range practice were presented by Governor Vic Donahay and General Nathan, commanding officer of Fifth Corps Area. Sergeant Gill will be awarded two medals at the local Armory Monday night.

Members of the guard unit enjoyed themselves while at camp, while at the same time the training period proved of educational value. The mornings were devoted to drill and the afternoons were spent with all forms of organized athletics.

YOUNG WOMAN DEAD

SANDUSKY, O., Aug. 1.—Miss Mary Uncle, 20, was killed and several others were injured when a touring car, with seven passengers, left the road on a curve, turned over twice and landed upside down. Ernest Stuckey, driver of the car, was arrested and is being held pending the coroner's report.

HUGE ENTRY LIST NOMINATED FOR GREENE COUNTY FAIR RACES

Racing at the 1927 edition of the Greene County Fair this week should go down in local history as a year in which some of the most interesting sport of all time was witnessed, in view of the great number of first class horses nominated for the meet.

Exactly 139 entries have been received for the six races and the entry list has not been padded.

Twenty-nine horses are scheduled to start in the 2:22 pace opening day, fourteen colts are nominated for the three-year-old and under trot, and ten pacers are entered in the 2:14 pace for the Greene County Lumber Co., $500 purse.

On the second day of the meeting, eleven racers are named for the 2:18 trot, eleven juveniles for the three-year-old and under pace, and seven horses will race in the 2:14 trot.

Twelve of the most speedy pacers in this part of the country are to start in the Free-For-All pace for the Nat Hunter $500 purse on the closing day. Twenty-nine trotters are to engage in the 2:22 trot with sixteen pacers in the closing feature, the 2:18 pace. Entry list follows:

north of Yellow Springs, Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock, were held

Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her son, Charles Clayton, Neff Grounds. Burial was made in Glen Forest Cemetery.

Mrs. Clayton's death was caused by concussion of the brain, with her advanced age as a contributing cause.

The sedan crashed into the rear of the roadster, overturning it.

The sedan was occupied by two men and one woman, all from Springfield, whose names were not learned. Occupants of the sedan stopped after the accident but were later taken to Springfield.

The license number of the car was

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies
By Flo Frederick

A good old letter from the gang makes Patsy homesick with a bang! Patsy and Marty had just returned to their cabin from their morning swim when they found this letter waiting for them. It was from the gang at home and they knew from the hand writing that Betty Ann had written it, but they were sure that Rag, Tag and Bill had had something to do with it. As Patsy suggested, Betty Ann had probably acted as stenographer while the boys dictated it to her. The letter sounded like home to Fluffy-tail seems very happy with her tree-house. For a squirrel she's pretty smart. Betty has taught her to come when you whistle and she eats out of your hand just as nice as Trinky.

Rag has been taking Trinky to bed with him nights. He said he did it at first because he thought Trinky would be lonesome for his bed in the carpenter shop, but the rest of us think it was just an excuse to have the dog with him.

We haven't staged a Ritzie affair since you left, even though we have added $3 to the treasury with our minnow sales. We've thought about giving the neighborhood a picnic or something, but without Patsy to write the invitations and Marty to see that things go off all right, we felt rather lost.

We will all be glad to have you back home again. Be sure to tell us when you're coming. If you drive through the Indian reservation on your way home, be sure to take some pictures. It would be great to have them for our clubroom.

Your best home town friends, Betty, Bill, Rag and Tag.

"Why the tears?" asked Marty, looking up from the letter.

"Oh, I don't know," sniffed Patsy. "It just seems so good to hear from the kids. It won't be so bad to break camp when we know that our fellow Ritzies at home are so anxious to see us, will it, Marty?"

"No, it won't," answered her brother. "You know I think I'd rather be a Ritzie than a Canadian guide!"

Patsy, and she was homesick before Marty had finished the first paragraph.

Dear Patsy and Marty:

Guess it's about time that the stay-at-homers were doing a little writing, too. We've been eating up every word of your letters and living over again your thrilling experiences in the woods.

We all get together in the carpenter shop and read the letters out loud. Betty Ann has told the postman all about your being away and now he gets as excited as the rest of us over your letters. We show him all the pictures you send and he still asks about that picture of the perch catch that Marty promised to send. Betty Ann calls him her Ritzie postman and, though he doesn't know what it means, he seems to like it.

The only exciting thing that's happened in Mayville since you've been away was that Jimmy Perkins fell in the creek. That's what he gets for being so stingy with his sailboat. He won't let anybody ride in it, so it served him right. He didn't get hurt, only mussed up his white, starchy clothes.

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN" HONEY LOU" THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL", ETC.

"We're just up against it," sobbed Mabel

CHAPTER XXV

"WON'T you dance with me now?" Millie's friend, Davidson, asked, smiling down at her.

Sally could feel his gray eyes going over her face. They seemed, somehow, to be stroking it like caressing fingers. They moved on, over her neck to her slender, light figure.

She moved away from him an inch or two. She hated to be looked at like that by a man.

"Don't you want to dance with me?" he was asking her now, and she shook her head and looked around for Ted. Surely he had had plenty of time to get her wraps from the check-room.

"No, I don't want to dance any more tonight. The floor's so crowded," she answered, looking up at him. "I'm here with Ted Sloan—you remember him, don't you?—and we just decided to go home."

"No, I don't remember him," the big blond man answered, bluntly, never taking his eyes from her. "The only person I remember meeting at your house was yourself."

Sally's color deepened and stirred. "What are you doing here?" she asked, quickly changing the subject.

She really wondered, too, what Davidson was doing in a place like the Blue Lagoon, which was a haunt of the young and gay and poor, and where dances cost but a nickel apiece. Surely he didn't belong here, with his fine linen shirt, his expensive-looking clothes, and the gold cigarette case that he fiddled with as he talked.

He belonged to another world—a world of high-powered cars, road-houses that had a cover charge and private dining rooms, tailor-made clothes and chased-silver liquor flasks. And none could tell that by looking at him.

Then, too, Sally knew that he never had taken Millie to places like the Blue Lagoon in the days when she had run around with him.

"Oh, I just dropped in on my way home from a card-game," he said, indifferently. "I do, sometimes. Been doing any more cooking lately?" His face lighted up as he asked her that.

"Any more cooking?" cried Sally. "Why, I cook every day of my life. Where do you suppose Ted can be? Let's go and look him up."

They started to push their way through the laughing, noisy crowd, his hand on Sally's arm above the elbow, and his big body close to hers as they moved.

"I wish you'd ask me up some night for supper," he said, in her ear. "I haven't had a real home-cooked meal for so many years that I can't remember. Will you?"

Once more she shook her small, beautifully-shaped head. "No, you're Millie's friend, and she'll have to ask you," she answered, with a little laugh. "She'd give me a terrible wriggling if I had anything to do with any of your friends, let me tell you. Besides, it wouldn't be quite fair, would it?"

Then, just as they found Ted, who was trying to sell a perspiring, fat young man an automobile, he asked her a second question.

"How does a girl like Millie Jerome have a sister like you?"

Sally didn't answer that one. To begin with, she did not clearly understand what he meant by it. And besides, Davidson did not seem to be asking for a reply. He seemed to be talking to himself, as much as to her.

All the way home through the warm October night, Sally thought that question over.

But she couldn't figure out what he meant, so finally she let it go at that.

"What does it matter, anyway?" she asked herself, and promptly put both it and Davidson himself out of her mind.

The night was starry and beautiful. She loved to ride along like this, with the wind singing in her ears and the steady hum of the motor lulling her senses.

To loll back in her seat with her head down and her back against the smooth leather of the cushions—with nothing to do until tomorrow morning. Nothing to do.

Sally signed comfortably and fell asleep.

Ted's voice wakened her. He had put one arm around her and was saying something about being "the champion one-armed driver in the United States."

"Oh, no, you're not! Not tonight, anyway!" Sally informed him, with a smile, and put his hand back on the driving wheel, where it belonged.

"That reminds me—I owe you two dollars for the first payment on Ted's check," she added, fishing in her little purse for two one-dollar bills, that she had folded there that afternoon.

Without a word Ted took them. He raced his car all the rest of the way home, and did not say "Good-night" when he left her—not at her door, but at his own on the first floor.

Millie was having a midnight lunch and listening to the radio in the dining room when Sally walked into the room.

"I'm just having the most awful time with Beau!" she began, hotly, not looking directly at Sally, as she talked. "He got paid yesterday noon, and last night at 5 o'clock he sailed in with half of his salary gone. He knows a bookmaker, and he'd been playing the races. He picked the wrong horse, of course. You'd just know it! And he wears so many clean clothes! You should have seen our laundry bill this week, and I had to pay it! What he had left last night he spent on a quart of liquor and a big tin of cigarettes."

"He's always spent his money that way. I've told you so a thousand times," Sally spoke gravely, her compassionate, understanding eyes on the unhappy face beside her.

"I know you have! But I never believed you 'till now," Mabel answered, frankly. "You see, I was so much in love with him."

"Aren't you still?" interrupted Sally. "You've been married only a week, you know."

Mabel put her head down on her knees and began to cry.

"Sure, I'm in love with him," she wept. "Do you think I'd stay with him, and pay his board bill and his laundry bill if I didn't love him? I spent every nickel of my salary except five dollars yesterday, Sally, settling up for the week—I tell you, we're just up against it!"

Very slowly Sally opened her little gray leather handbag, and took out a five-dollar bill from it. She knew what she was expected to do, and she did it.

"I can only lend you this, Mabel," she said, folding it into Mabel's eager little paw. "Mother was going to buy you a wedding present, but I'll try to persuade her to give you the money instead. And then you'll have to pay this money back to me. I'm sorry, but I've got to have it again."

"Sure, I'll pay it back! You know I will." And Mabel jumped up, brushed the tears from her eyes, gave her skirts a shake, and was herself again!

"You're a sweet cookie!" she declared, flatteringly, and hid the money in the top of her rolled stocking.
